LORD SAMUEL SPENT A GREAT LIFE FULL OF HONOUR, WAS FIRST BRITISH JEW TO ATTAIN CABINET RANK

Lord Samuel's death at 92 has removed from the House of Lords a former enemy of it whose eloquence and humour had been one of its graces for thirty years.

Five years ago his half-century as a Privy Councillor was marked by the Order of Merit. He differed from that earlier great Whig, Lord Melbourne, who observed: "I like the Garter. There is no damned merit in it."

He differed also in 1932. In 1841, after a Cabinet meeting, Lord Melbourne said: "It is not much matter which we say, but mind, we must all say the same." As home Secretary in the National Government Sir Herbert Samuel, as he then was, maintained that:

"Agreement to differ has been the only alternative to the break-up of the National Government." He resigned shortly afterwards.

Viscount Samuel was not only a leading British statesman but a renowned philosopher. He served the Liberals in the House of Commons for twenty-two years before being elevated to the peerage in 1937.

He was proud to be "the first member of the Jewish community" to attain Cabinet rank. He was made a Privy Councillor in 1908, and in the following year Mr. Asquith called him to the Cabinet as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

He was Home Secretary in Mr. Asquith's Government in 1916. He held the post again under Mr. Ramsay MacDonald [illegible] National Government from 1931.

In July 1931 he relinquished the leadership of the Liberal party in the House of Lords, having held it from 1944. He was deputy leader from 1941 to 1944. He led the Liberals in the Commons from 1931-37.

As Postmaster-General from 1910-14 he negotiated the first contract between the Government and Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, and acquisition by the GPO of the telephone system in Britain. When Mr. Lloyd George succeeded Mr. Asquith as Prime Minister in December, 1916, he disagreed with the way "the change had come about" and declined to take office under him.

He remained active in the Commons and helped to pass the Bill that made women eligible for Parliament. He had represented the Clevedon division of Yorkshire from 1902-18, and returned to Parliament as M.P. for Darwen, Lancs, in 1929.

He was knighted in 1920 and appointed High Commissioner for Palestine, a post he held for five years. He returned to Britain to preside over the Commission on the coal industry.

He devoted much time to philosophical studies, becoming president of the British Institute of that name, later renamed the Royal Institute of Philosophy.

Lady Samuel, formerly Miss Beatrice Miriam Franklin, died in 1969, aged 88. They were married in 1897, and there were three sons and one daughter. His heir is Edwin Herbert Samuel, principal of the Institute of Public Administration in Israel.

Viscount Samuel, the [illegible] peer, had made [illegible] Porchester Terrace, Paddington. He had been ill for about two weeks. The funeral was private and a memorial service was held at the New West End Synagogue, St. Petersburgh Place, London, on February 13, at 11 a.m.

The Earl of Dundee, Deputy Leader of the House, said that by the death of Viscount Samuel British public life had lost one of its oldest and most honourable figures.

Most of us (he said) had not yet been born, and Mr. Gladstone had not yet died, when Lord Samuel first stood as a Parliamentary candidate in the general election of 1895.

The Leader of the House, Viscount Hailsham, who regretted that he could not be present, had sent a message saying that they would remember with gratitude the long life and work of Lord Samuel whose life had been well spent and full of honour.

In particular the House would think of the Liberal Party whose leader he had been. He was one of the few links with governments preceding the First World War: Lord Samuel brought to his public life immense gifts of intellect and character. The great value of having such a man so dedicated to public life outside the Government was clearly manifested by the roles he had played in the Parliamentary life of his time.

Lord Rea said it was for him a poignant occasion. He spoke for a section of British political life which had lost its most eminent and valued older statesman.

He spoke for his Liberal colleagues in the House who, like himself, had been privileged and grateful to have served under a wise, understanding, . . and inspiring leader and counsellor. He spoke also for himself and others who were his friends and who highly valued his friendship and his endearing personal character.

They were grateful to Lord Samuel for his life and for his contribution to the integrity and idealism of British politics.

Earl Alexander of Hillsborough said he always liked Lord Samuel's graciousness to comparatively uneducated people like himself. The last memory of all who knew him would be of his integrity.

Bigotry Of Religionists Enduring, Says Douglas

Associate Justice William O. Douglas, of the U.S. Supreme Court, said that man must find a "common ground" if he is to escape nuclear holocaust. But he said he doubted that it would be found in religion.

"Protestants and Jews, Catholics and Moslems still assert patents on an exclusive creed," the Supreme Court Justice observed. "They speak of 'false' beliefs and 'true' beliefs."

"In spite of our First Amendment, separating church and state, some clerics hope to put the power of government behind a particular creed, so that all non-believers can be brought to heel. Sect still competes with sect; the bigotry of religionists seems enduring.

"In some areas the Christian faith is identified with white race, or with landlords. In some Moslem areas minorities of Christians, Jews, and Hindus suffer rank discrimination."

Justice Douglas spoke at a mid-year graduation ceremony at Roosevelt University. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Moscow Paper Confirms Murder Of Mikhoels, Yiddish Actor

A Soviet newspaper has confirmed that Solomon Mikhoels, noted Yiddish actor and director, was murdered by the Soviet Secret Police 15 years ago. It was believed to be the first time that the circumstances of Mikhoel's death, long known in the West, had been made public in the Soviet Union, says the New York Times. The official version has been that he died in an automobile accident on a visit to Minsk in January, 1948.

Mikhoels was associated throughout his 30-year dramatic career with the Moscow Jewish State Theater the closing of which a few months after his death marked the start of the anti-Jewish campaign in the last five years of Stalin's life.

The theater has not been reopened despite evident interest among Jews in a permanent theater of their own.

Mikhoels is best remembered in the United States for his visit in World War II when he toured the U.S. and Canada as chairman of the Jewish Anti-Fascist Committee of Moscow to rally support among Jews for the Soviet war effort.

The circumstances of Mikhoels's death at the age of 57 and details of the last five years of his life were [illegible] in the Lithuanian newspaper Sovetskaya Litva in a [illegible] article signed by Lazar Lurie, former assistant director in the Moscow Jewish Theater.

[illegible] what might have been an allusion to the abolition of Yiddish [illegible] activities, Mr. Lurie [illegible] was ended by the wild Beria clique, those who calculatedly and pitilessly crushed material and spiritual culture of the people, destroying leaders of party and Government and figures in science, literature, and the arts."

It has become fashionable to attribute the purges in the last years of Stalin's life to his secret police chief, Lavrenti P. Beria, who was executed on treason charges within a year after the dictator's death.

Mr. Lurie reported that Mikhoels, at the time of his death, had been working on production of a

Study Shows Education Does Not Change Racial Prejudice

Formal education, as now set up, is ineffective in changing racial prejudices, a ten-year, nation-wide study of attitudes toward minorities shows.

Little, if any, change in individual prejudices was found during most students' college years. Moreover, education as an agent against prejudice appears relatively more effective among persons of low socio-economic origins, says the New York Times, than among the well-established and wealthy.

The 182-page study by Charles Herbert Stember, Professor of Sociology and chairman of the Sociology Department at Rutgers University, was made public by the Institute of Human Relations of the American Jewish Committee.

Entitled "Education And Attitude Change," the report deals mainly with prejudice toward Jews and Negroes.

One of the undesirable by-products of the "educational philosophy of the open mind," which allows two sides to every question, is the creation of a vacuum into which the "prevailing [illegible] prejudice" may rush, [illegible] waiting. He adds that, because the better educated are the first to sense changes in the popular climate, they tend "to shift with the tide of opinion."

The report rejects the widely held belief that educated people show less prejudice simply because they usually come from the higher socio-economic strata, where [illegible] justice is alleged [illegible] less prevalent.

It finds no evidence that [illegible] in the higher [illegible] are, in fact, less prejudiced, though they generally adopt the "language of the bigot." But when anti-Semitism has risen or fallen in society, the simultaneous changes in attitude have been sharpest among the educated, the report says.

The study finds the positive effects of education strongest among persons of lower economic status. It finds the lowest degree of prejudice among the highly educated who have come from lower-class beginnings, says the New York Times, "probably because educa-

Urges Young Jews Outside Israel To Identify With Jewish Life

The Jews in America and elsewhere outside Israel cannot be "preserved from assimilation by the existence of Israel in itself," Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion has warned. He urged that to "develop a Jewish content of their own," Hebrew should become the second language for every Jewish boy or girl, and Jewish

Mr. and Mrs. Gershon Taitelbaum, 6249 DeVimy Avenue, gave a cocktail party at their home to celebrate the engagement of their daughter, Miss Esther Taitelbaum, to Irving Beckman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Beckman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who were here for the occasion. There were seventy guests. Mrs. Taitelbaum wore a black chiffon and lace sheath, made with a scooped neckline; short sleeves; and floating panels at the back. Her corsage was of white roses. Mrs. Beckman was in a green, beaded sheath, which had a low neckline; and cap sleeves; with a corsage of yellow roses. Miss Taitelbaum wore a turquoise-blue, silk sari sheath, designed with a high neckline in front and lower at the back; and her wristlet was of white orchids. A centerpiece of red and white roses adorned the table. Here for the occasion were: Alex Beckman, of New York, brother of the groom-to-be; and Mrs. D. Frankfort, of N. Y., sister of the bride-to-be.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Goodman, 2224 Noel Street, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Marven Andrew, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth David-Beth Yitzchok-Kahal Yeshurun Synagogue. He is the brother of Misses Carol Rhonda and Shelby Goodman; and Joel Goodman; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goodman, 4537 Jeanne Mance Street; and of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Spunt, 4950 Plamondon Avenue. Kiddush was observed. A luncheon was served to one hundred and fifty guests in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Goodman wore a turquoise-blue, metallic suit; also a matching hat. Mrs. Spunt was in a black and white, knitted suit; with a white straw hat. Miss Carol Rhonda Goodman was in a charcoal-grey, brocaded suit; and had a red, straw hat. Miss Shelby Goodman wore a pink, knitted suit; with a black, straw hat. Seated at the head table with the immediate family were: Rabbi Isaac J. Teicher, Cantor J. Dlin, and A. Larnes, Marven Andrew's teacher. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. Rabbi Teicher asked a blessing over the challah. The table was trimmed with a blue and white bar-mitzvah cake; and bouquets of blue and white roses, and pom-poms.

Mrs. B. Kramer, 1460 Franklyn Drive, was a luncheon hostess to twenty guests at Ruby Foo's, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of her daughter, Trudy; sister of Richard Kramer; and Elaine, aged eight years; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Glassberg; and of Mrs. Sarah Kramer; all of Montreal. Mrs. Kramer wore a white, knitted dress; with a corsage of pink roses. Trudy wore a dress with a black velvet skirt, and white and gold-coloured bodice; and had a wristlet of pink carnations. A pink and white birthday cake was arranged with pink and white carnations for table decoration. That evening, and the following evening, Mr. and Mrs. Kramer were hosts to eighty guests at their home. Trudy wore a light blue, chiffon dress, with full skirt. The table held a yellow and white birthday cake, and a centerpiece of white carnations.

Mrs. F. Weisbloom, 5166 Trans Island Avenue; and her daughter, Mrs. I. Parker, 1483 Mercantile Street, Chomedey, gave a luncheon, with one hundred and four guests present, at the Stage Coach Inn, in honour of the former's granddaughter, Miss Recia Kolker, daughter of Max Kolker, 4487 A. Esplanade Avenue, and the late Mrs. Elsie Kolker, and the fiancee of Barnard Gordon, son of David Gordon, and Mrs. Sarah Gordon, both of Montreal. Mrs. Weisbloom wore a black silk suit; with a corsage of white roses. Mrs. Parker was in a white and black printed sheath; and had a corsage of white roses. Miss Recia Kolker wore a coral-coloured, tunic-styled, shantung dress which had a round neckline; and elbow-length sleeves; and her corsage was of white roses. The table was decorated with a centerpiece of white and yellow carnations and gladioli.

When I Was A Child In Vitebsk

BY BELLA CHAGALL

Bella Chagall was born in Vitebsk into a Chassidic family. At the age of 20 she married Marc Chagall. Her literary work was pursued first in Russian and then in French. Only towards the end of her short life did she begin to write in Yiddish. "It is an odd thing", she says, "a desire comes to me to write in my faltering mother-tongue, which as it happens, I have not spoken since I left the home of my parents. My old home is not there any more. Everything is gone, even dead — And so, just once, I want to wrest from the darkness a day, an hour, a moment belonging to my vanished home".

Next morning when I wake up, everyone has long since gone to shul (synagogue). Again I am alone in the house . . .

I am angry at myself because I am not yet fasting through the whole day. Every year I beg mother to permit me to fast. I cannot eat after witnessing grandfather's tears, and after seeing father come home with his pale, drawn face. He comes from shul to rest a little. With his white lips, his white kittel, and his white socks he looks — God forbid — as though he were not alive at all. I fancy that his soul has already become very pure and that it shines through his white garments. I begin to pray more fervently. I want to be at least in some small measure as pious as father.

Mother stays at the shul through the whole day. Before the Musaf I go to see her to ask how she is. The cantor can no longer be heard. The men's section is half empty. Some have gone home to rest, others sit on the benches, their eyes on their prayer book. Boys play in the shul courtyard; some have apples to eat, some have pieces of challa with honey. But the women's section is full of stifled weeping. In every corner a woman sighs and laments.

"Lord of the Universe, Lord of the Universe!" The chant resounds on all sides.

Mother is weeping quietly. She can scarcely any longer see the little letters of her prayer book through her clouded spectacles.

I stand at some distance and wait. Mother catches her breath, raises her weeping face, and nods to me to tell me that she is feeling well, although she resumes her weeping at once. I come closer to her. I do not know what to do among all these weeping mothers. I look down into the men's section. The cantor's white kittel and white skullcap are still. I look among the rows of tall candles for our two. They are burning among all the other candles, burning high into the air at either side of the holy ark.

Suddenly a humming and a clamour rise over the shul. It becomes full of men. There is a bustle, the air grows hot. Men throng around the cantor. The heavy curtain of the holy ark is drawn aside. Now there is silence, the air has become motionless. Only the rustle of prayer shawls can be heard. The men hurry toward the holy ark. The shining scrolls of the Torah, like princesses awakened from sleep, are carried out from the ark. On their white and dark red velvet mantles great stars gleam — Shields of David embroidered in silver and gold. The handles are mounted with silver, encrusted with mother-of-pearl, and crowns and little bells hang from them.

Light glows around the scrolls of the Torah. All the men in the shul are drawn toward them. The scrolls are surrounded, escorted. The men crowd after the scrolls of the Torah, trying at least to catch a glimpse of them, send a kiss to them from a distance. And then, the beautiful scrolls of the Torah, upper-most above the heads of the worshippers, above all the outstretched hands, and move slowly through the shul.

I can hardly keep myself behind the handrail of the women's section. I should like so much to jump down, to fall straight into the embrace of the holy Torahs, or at least move closer to them, to their quivering light, at least touch them, kiss their bright glory. But the scrolls are already being carried back, back to the holy ark. From both sides of it the tall candles twinkle at them. The velvet curtain is drawn, darkness comes to my eyes.

As though to drown the sadness, the men begin at once to pray aloud.

I remain standing at the window. I am attracted by the men's section, its clamorous air, filled with white taleisim (prayer shawls), like upraised wings surging through the shul, covering every dark spot. Only here and there a nose or an eye peeps out. The talis (the prayer shawl) stripes sway like stairs above the covered heads.

One falls billows up, emits a groan, and smothers the sound within itself. The shul grows dark. I am seized by fear. The taleaim bend, shake, move upward, turn to all sides. Taleaim sigh, pray, moan. Suddenly my legs give way. Taleaim quiver, drop to the ground like heavy sacks. Here and there a white woollen sock sticks out. Voices erupt as from underground. Taleaim begin to roll, as on a ship that is sinking and going down amid the heaving waves.

I do not hear the cantor at all. Hoarse voices outshout one another. They pray, they implore, asking that the ceiling open for them. Hands stretch upward. The cries set the lamps shaking. At any moment now the walls will crumble and let Elijah the Prophet fly in.

Grown-up men are crying like children. I cannot stand it any longer. I myself am crying more and more. I recover only when I perceive at last a living, weeping eye behind a crouching talis, when I hear trembling voices saying to one another: "Gut yom-tov! Gut yom-tov!"

MARRIAGES

GERBER-PEARLSTEIN

The marriage of Miss Judy Anne Pearlstein, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Martin Pearlstein, of Yeadon, Pa., to Robert Gerber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gerber, of Philadelphia, Pa., was solemnized on December 22, 1962, at six o'clock, at Yeadon Synagogue. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a princess gown of white, peau de soie, with long, lily-pointed sleeves; and a cathedral train which extended from the bouffant skirt. A cabbage rose of the same material placed her finger-tip, tulle illusion veil; and her flowers were a cascade of white roses. Mrs. Pearlstein, the bride's mother, wore a long, blue, peau de soie gown which was beaded; also a matching, pill-box hat with veil; and had a wristlet of mauve orchids. Mrs. Gerber, the groom's mother, was attired in a long, turquoise-blue, entirely beaded, satin sheath; with a matching pill box; and a wristlet of purple orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Fine, 1576 Eglinton Avenue West, grandparents of the bride, were also in the wedding party. Mrs. Fine wore a long, pink, chiffon gown embellished with bugle beads, and pearl-beads; also a pink, feathered, pill-box hat; and had a wristlet of mauve orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gerber spent their honeymoon in New York. They are residing in Philadelphia. Also there for the marriage was Miss Helen Fine, 1576 Eglinton Avenue West, Toronto, aunt of the bride.

Elath, Once Desert Outpost On Ancient Caravan Trail From Egypt To Arabia, Is Busy Port

An Israeli soldier sits on a dusty hill-top at Elath, Israel, and gazes through binoculars across the curved rim of the Gulf of Aqaba at the Jordanian port of Aqaba. His duties are essentially military, but he also finds time to watch an occasional soccer match and then tune in on the Jordanian radio to find out who was playing, says the New York Times. The chances are good that the Jordanian soldier is doing exactly the same thing in Aqaba to keep his superiors informed on what is going on among the Israelis at Elath, Israel's southernmost settlement in the Negev desert.

A great deal has been going on in Elath since 1956, the year the Israeli Army swept into the Sinai desert and opened the Red Sea to Israeli shipping. Before the Sinai campaign Elath was, in the words of its Mayor, Joseph Levy, "two rows of houses and 700 settlers." Today it no longer is an almost-forgotten desert outpost on the ancient caravan trail from Egypt to Arabia but a busy port and expanding beach resort with a population of 8,000.

The town sprawls along seven miles of beach and eroded hills between the United Arab Republic on the west and Jordan in the east. If this beachhead were not held by Israel, there would be no break in the Moslem-ruled territory that reaches from Morocco on North Africa's Atlantic Coast to Pakistan in South Central Asia.

An undulating highway stretches 155 sunbaked miles between Elath and Beersheba, the northern gateway to the Negev. The Israelis refer to the highway as their "overland Suez Canal," because it links with the Red Sea and the trade routes to East Africa and Asia. Every day heavy trucks pound up and down its length. And under the burning sands a pipeline carries crude oil north to the refineries at Haifa.

Elath's growth has been in spurts, and the town now seems on the verge of moving into a new period of expansion. Its economy is based on tourism, the port, and the copper mines of Timna, fifteen miles to the north, where King Solomon worked similar mines 2,900 years ago.

The port area is on the western bend of the shoreline, not far from the frontier with Egypt. Great clouds of dust are being raised there by trucks and bulldozers pushing a hill into the sea to expand the docking facilities, says the New York Times. When completed in 1965, more than 1,500,000 cubic meters of rocky soil will have been dumped into the gulf. The handling capacity of the port is expected to be doubled.

The loneliness and ruggedness of life in Elath and its restricted employment opportunities have led some 200 families to quit and go north each summer when the sun starts to beat down mercilessly. But Government and private inducements such as reduced taxes, available housing on easy terms and special desert allowances have attracted enough new settlers to keep the population growing.

The Government also offers generous grants and loans to encourage industrial investment. The equivalent of $16,000,000 will be invested in the Timna copper works to double production in the next four years. In an attempt to diversify the economy, two new light industries — a saw mill and a rope factory — are to be started in Elath with Israeli and American capital.

Elath is dry, with an average annual rainfall of one and a half inches, and summer temperatures can soar to 120 degrees. But the winter climate is excellent, which is why Elath is being promoted as a resort. Hotel accommodations are being expanded along the beach near Jordan to meet the demand. By 1965 the present total of 260 hotel rooms will have been doubled.

The coral reefs, which abound in brilliantly colored tropical fish, are Elath's most interesting attraction. They can be seen in glass-bottomed boats or simply by slipping into a swimsuit and snorkel and swimming a few yards out to sea, says the New York Times. So avid have been the skin-diving collectors that the reefs have been turned into a national preserve.

MARRIAGES

WEINER-HANDEL

The marriage of Miss Sheila Handel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Handel, 6390 Mountain Sights Avenue, to Marvin Weiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Issie Weiner, 6883 Baily Road, took place at Shomrim Laboker-Beth Yehudah-Shaare Tefillah Synagogue, on Sunday, February 17, at half-past six o'clock. Dr. Chaim N. Denburg, Rabbi, officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white, peau de soie gown; fashioned with a fitted, beaded bodice; round neckline; long sleeves, in points at the wrists; and full skirt ending as a chapel train. Her veil of tulle illusion was draped to a crown of seed-pearl-beads; and she carried a prayer book with mauve orchids. Miss Trudy Caplan was her cousin's maid of honour, wearing a sleeveless, beige, velvet gown, made with a boat-shaped neckline; and full skirt; also a beige veil; and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. Gerald Weiner was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Melvin Handel, brother of the bride; Michael Caplan, cousin of the bride; Irwin Gerber, Mark Vineberg, and Joel Weiner, cousins of the groom; and Harold Fralberg. The wedding flowers were pink and white chrysanthemums, gladioli, and carnations. The wedding music was played by an orchestra. Three hundred and twenty-five guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Handel, mother of the bride, was in a sleeveless, champagne and gold-coloured brocaded gown, designed with a beaded bodice; and V-neckline; and her hat matched it. Mrs. Weiner, mother of the groom, wore a blue, peau de soie gown; with three-quarter-length sleeves; full skirt; and bolero; also a blue hat. Each had a corsage of mauve orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Weiner spent their wedding trip in Jamaica, West Indies, the bride departing in a white, knitted suit. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. Esther Davidson, great-aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Moe Caplan, and Elaine, uncle and aunt of the bride; Melvin Handel, brother of the bride; all of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Max Handel, uncle, and aunt of the bride, and Seymour; Issie Handel, uncle of the bride; and Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Gerber; all of New York.

SPECTOR-HANDELSMAN

The marriage of Miss Carol Florence Handelsman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Handelsman, 5264 Borden Avenue, to Allen Spector, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Spector, 4872 Mariette Avenue, took place at Shaare Zedek Synagogue, on Sunday, February 10, at six o'clock, Rabbi A. Bernard Leffell officiating, assisted by Cantor M. Fogel. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white, beaded, peau de soie, cut with a fitted bodice; round neckline; long sleeves; and full bouffant skirt with a long train. Her veil of tulle illusion was placed by a crown of seed-pearl-beads and crystals; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Marvin Helfenbaum was matron of honour for her sister. She wore a turquoise-blue, sleeveless gown, made with a beaded bodice; a round neckline; and full skirt; also a matching, pill-box hat; and carried a cascade of white and pink roses. The bridesmaids were: Misses Beverly Spector, sister of the groom; Rona Sharad, cousin of the bride; Beatrice Mars, and Carol Craft. Each wore a turquoise-blue, sleeveless gown, made with round neckline; and skirt fashioned with a bow at the back, holding two panels over a slightly flared skirt; also a beaded tiara; and carried a muff of white and pink carnations. Harvey Sternthal was best man. The ushers were, Norman Handelsman, brother of the bride; Marvin Helfenbaum, brother-in-law of the bride; Barry, Allan, and Howard Cracower, cousins of the groom; Ronald Silverstone, Jerry Lewis, and Michael Saykaly. Pink and white chrysanthemums, gladioli and roses were the wedding flowers. An orchestra played the wedding music. Dinner by candlelight was served for two hundred guests in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Handelsman, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise-blue chiffon sheath, which had a lace bodice; and round neckline; and her petal hat was of that shade. Mrs. Spector, mother of the groom, wore a beaded, turquoise-blue, crepe sheath; having a hat of the same shade. Each had a corsage of gold-coloured orchids. Mrs. Rose Spector, grandmother of the groom, was in a turquoise-blue, lace sheath, with its own matching jacket. Her hat matched it; and her corsage was of pink carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Allen Spector spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N.Y., the bride travelling in a black-knitted mohair suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 7448 Kingsley Road.

TORONTO MARRIAGES

ROSEN-SABSAY

The marriage of Miss Linda Sabsay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Sabsay, 10 Nina Street, to Percy Rosen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Rosen, of Kitchener, Ont., was solemnized on February 20, at Adath Israel Synagogue, at half-past six o'clock, by Rabbi Erwin Schild, Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut, and Rabbi Philip Rosensweig, of Kitchener, Ont., assisted by Cantor Murray Nixon. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white velvet; fashioned with fitted bodice; high neckline; long sleeves; and a full skirt; and had a separate cathedral train which fell from the shoulders. Her veil of tulle illusion was the length of the train, topped by a circlet of white orange blossoms; and her flowers were orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Michael Feldman, sister of the groom, was matron of honour, wearing a long gown of shocking-pink chiffon, with beaded bodice; and a full skirt. She had a matching headdress; and carried a global bouquet of red, and pink carnations. Lynda Gordon, of Kitchener, Ont., and Diane Rose, of Hamilton, Ont.; both nieces of the groom, were junior bridesmaids. Each wore a long gown of rose-coloured peau de soie, with bustle back, and beaded cummerbund. Their headdresses were cabbage roses of that material; and their flowers were red and pink carnations. Jack Rosen, of Kitchener, Ont., brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Arthur Levy, Daniel Himelson, and Bruce Sabsay; all cousins of the bride; B. Papernick, cousin of the groom; Brian Gordon, nephew of the groom; and Jack Kronis; both of Kitchener, Ont. Three hundred guests were received at a dinner at the Synagogue. The wedding music was played by Murray Alter and his orchestra. Mrs. Sabsay, mother of the bride, wore a long sheath of pale-pink peau de soie, adorned with beadwork around the straight, high neckline, with a V at the back, and in a rose design at the bottom of the skirt which ended in a short train. She had a matching headdress. Mrs. Rosen, mother of the groom, was in a long gown of deep-rose-coloured peau de soie, fashioned with draped bodice; and beaded panel from the shoulder at the front and back; with a matching headdress. Both had pink orchid wristlets. Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rosen spent their honeymoon trip in Mexico. The bride departed in a beige, silk shantung dress, with its own jacket; and an oyster-coloured, sheared beaver coat; and had a white orchid corsage. They will reside in Kitchener, Ont. Here for the wedding from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Flusty, of Detroit, Mich., uncle, and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, and Brian, Lynda, and Sheri, of Kitchener, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Career Women Want To Be Beautiful, Charming, Fashionable, And Successful

A big New York store was surprised by the results of a survey it made of the nearly 600 members of its new Career Club. It had expected that these working women would be almost as interested in cooking and interior design as in fashion, but that was not the case. Given a choice, the women would rather be beautiful, charming, fashionable, and successful in their work.

As a result, the club's program, which is being tailored to the interests suggested by the survey, will include beauty clinics, charm clinics, and fashion shows, says the New York Times. A psychologist has already given the members some tips on how to succeed in business, and a financial expert has told them how to budget, save, spend, and invest their money.

"We thought they'd be interested in clothes," a store spokesman said, "but we had no idea how interested. They're very enthusiastic."

The women, who are between the ages of twenty and sixty, want clothes that may be dressed down for the office and up for evening, good accessories, and suggestions for using them effectively. In addition, they want clothes that are good value for the money. And, although some have preconceived ideas about color ("I usually wear beige, gray, or brown"), they are willing to try new ideas.

"They have good taste," the spokesman said. "They like exciting clothes, not dull ones, but nothing faddish. They want to know what to wear when." They are also concerned about physical fitness, exercises, and keeping or regaining their girlish figures. "When we started the club, we thought most of the members might be recruited from among office workers," the spokesman said. "Actually, the careers run the gamut."

There are school teachers and nurses, real estate women and librarians, models and executive secretaries, a children's wear designer, a sportswear designer, and a legal assistant. Some are older women with families. Others are young, beginning careerists who share their apartments with other single girls.

The women seem to have two things in common, the spokesman said. They are serious about their careers and they do not have much time. They want to buy all their clothes in one place.

The store, which was not sure what the response to the idea of a career club would be, started it in connection with a one-stop shopping area dedicated to the woman on the run, says the New York Times. It stocked the third-floor shop with clothes — dresses, suits, hats, coats, gloves, handbags, jewelry, scarves, and small furs — from all over the store. And it staffed the department with women who not only sell but also advise.

CLASS IN COOKERY

three eggs
three-quarters cup oil
one orange one-half teaspoon salt
three-quarters cup sugar
two teaspoons vanilla
three and one-half to four cups flour three teaspoons baking powder

Beat eggs and sugar. Add oil, vanilla, juice and rind of orange. Gradually add the flour, baking powder, and salt which have been sifted together three times.

Filling

one pound prunes
one-half cup walnuts (optional)
one-half cup sugar
one-half cup raisins
one lemon

Cover prunes with cold water and boil for twenty minutes. Set aside to cool. Pit prunes. Mince prunes, raisins, and nuts. Add lemon rind and juice, and sugar, mix well. Roll out dough on a well floured board, to one-eighth-inch in thickness. Cut in two inch rounds. Place one teaspoon of prune mixture in center, and pinch together in three-edged shape. Set the hamantashen on a slightly-greased cookie sheet, and bake at 350 to 375 degrees for twenty minutes until golden brown.

Mrs. A. Katz,
451 Wolseley Avenue North, Montreal.

PURIM NUT GOODIES

one pound walnuts
one-half pound almonds
one pound honey
one-half cup sugar
one teaspoon ginger, or one teaspoon vanilla

Bring honey and sugar to a boil. Blanch almonds by pouring boiling water over them and letting them stand until the skins will slip off between the fingers. Cut almonds and walnuts in small pieces. Add to honey mixture and boil until you can form a soft ball. Add flavouring. Flatten the mixture on wet board to a quarter-inch thickness. When cool cut in pieces, in any shape you prefer.

Mrs. Robert Altman,
120 Dell Park Avenue, Toronto.

DEEP FRY FILLETS

one pound sliced fillets
one-quarter cup oil
one egg
one-half cup flour
one-half cup milk

Mix flour in a bowl with oil. Add beaten egg and milk. Blend with egg beater until smooth. Cut fillets into three-inch pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Dust fish with flour. Dip into egg batter and fry in deep fryer in pre-heated oil till golden brown.

Mrs. Frank Paul,
630 D'Anvers Street, Montreal.

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines
SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

Viscount Samuel's Armoury Of Talents And Long Political Service

BY KENNETH ROSE, IN THE LONDON TIMES

Few men devoted their lives more assiduously to politics than Viscount Samuel or suffered its disappointments with greater fortitude. Entering the House of Commons as a Liberal in 1902, he could display a glittering armoury of talents. He had a sharp intellect and a persuasive tongue, a Balliol education, and a private income.

Inevitably, it seemed, he must rise to high office in the State, perhaps to the highest office of all. For a democratic age, however, he lacked a popular touch. He was a master of minutes rather than of men.

He had no patience with the kind-hearted though indiscriminate relief of poverty for which his family was widely respected. Charity, he felt, dealt with the symptoms of distress; only Government action could deal with its causes. At the Home Office and the Local Government Board he initiated whole Blue Books of reforms, from the care of children to the prevention of industrial disease.

He accepted Whitehead's belief that the art of progress is to preserve order amid change and change amid order: but to this he added, "and liberty amid both." To the end of his life he remained a stern enemy of heartless bureaucracy. "One cannot expect much mother love from an incubator," he would remark in later years.

It was his political fate to be tied to the fortunes of the Liberal Party. Until the fall of the Asquith Government in 1916 he was a valued, even indispensable, member of the Cabinet. Thereafter he never again held political office save during the financial crisis of 1931-32.

Nor was this entirely deplorable. His gifts were suited more to the calm of administration than to the hubbub of politics. As such they were called upon by whatever Government happened to be in power.

Lloyd George appointed him High Commissioner in Palestine; Baldwin made him chairman of the Royal Commission on the Coal Industry and asked him to use his healing touch during the subsequent General Strike.

MacDonald persuaded him to join the National Government during a vital few months; Chamberlain was less successful in inviting him to join his Administration in 1938.

Samuel's achievement in Palestine from 1920 to 1925 was outstanding. As a Jew he had warm sympathies for the Zionist cause; as an administrator he subordinated them to a just and humane balance of government between Arab and Jew.

"I was there to administer the country," he rightly boasted, "not for the benefit of one section of the population only, but for all; not commissioned by the Zionist, but in the name of the King."

It was a favourite dictum of Lord Samuel's that the leader of a party must care for something beyond the leadership of a party. For him it was the pursuit of philosophy.

Though his step lost some of its firmness as he approached his 90th birthday, he continued almost to the end to sit regularly in the Upper House. His translation there, two years after losing his seat at the General Election of 1935, was made possible by an all-party Coronation Honours List. A relentless enemy of the House of Lords in 1910, he now delighted in its traditions and pageantry.

Not infrequently he would be heard in debate, reproaching the rigidity of a two-party system. His voice was strong and precise, his manner courteous, his text wise and epigrammatic.

Except for Sir Winston Churchill, no Privy Councillor of our time has surpassed him in length of service.

Leaders Of Judaism Must Impose Standards; They Themselves Must Be Jewish As Well As Leaders

Excerpts from an address to the biennial convention of the Southwest Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, at Memphis, Tennessee

BY RABBI NATHAN A. PERILMAN, OF TEMPLE EMANU-EL, IN NEW YORK

Too long have the temples, the rabbis, and our national institutions been content with being spear-carriers and chorus and ticket-sellers in the grand opera of Jewish community organization. The time has come for the leaders of Judaism to impose standards of Jewish life even as our faith imposes principles of personal conduct. The least that we have a right to insist upon is that Jewish leaders watch their posture, that they be indeed Jewish as well as leaders; that they find their continuing inspiration in Jewish idealism, and that they not only know where synagogues and temples are located, but that they frequently be found in them for the same purposes of prayer, study, and fellowship, as that of their followers and sustainers.

The Jewish religious community, Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform, separately or in concert, should inform the policy-makers and professionals of all agencies that they will no longer honor or follow a leadership whose religious commitment is so tenuous as to be indiscernible, or whose attitude toward religion is mere formality or lukewarm; when it is not hostile or contemptuous. The least we should demand is that the primary ingredient of Jewish leadership be Jewishness. Can you imagine that any other religious group in American life would demand less?

We have a broad tolerance for difference in the patterns and points of emphasis in Jewish life. We need and mutually profit from all of the agencies that make up the multi-faceted structure of the Jewish community. We need the philanthropically-minded, the defense-motivated, and the Israel-directed, among us. But let us insist that they also need us, not in subsidiary or supporting roles, but as central to Jewish life.

Though we Jews no longer call ourselves a holy people, we do insist that we be regarded as a religious people. We protest when racists attempt to treat us as racially different. We go to great lengths and to great expense to prove that we are not distinguishable from our neighbors in our political attachments, or our social philosophies, or economic credos. We can prove to our own satisfaction and to the satisfaction of any open-minded person that as Jews we are no different from our neighbors in any of the values and loyalties that count, except in the matter of religion. On this we differ and we point with pride to our long unbroken, unchanged, commitment to our religious heritage.

This then is our posture to ourselves, our neighbors, our fellow-countrymen, and before the world, our distinctiveness is our religion. This being so, it is incumbent upon each one of us to watch our posture, to preserve and brighten this image of ourselves by which we wish to be recognized.

There are some among us who think they are most Jewish when they devote themselves to philanthropic endeavors. They remember Jewish pride in taking care of our own. They respond to every appeal and listen to Judaism's admonition about their brethren who are in need. This is good; it is not all of Judaism.

There are some who join in every effort to save the fair name of the Jewish people. They participate in the program of local and national agencies who concern themselves with those who revile us, and would bring harm upon us because we are an outlet for their fears and hates. This is important and necessary, it is not all of Judaism.

There are some who devote themselves to the needs of Israel, and want to further its chances for wholesome growth in the family of nations. Remembering the tragedy which scorched these people under Hitler's tyranny, they want to help them find a new life in their new land. This, too, has its deepest roots in Jewish compassion and brotherly responsibility; it is not all of Judaism.

If these manifestations of our Jewishness were doubled, trebled, increased tenfold, they would greatly help worthy causes, but they could do nothing for the image we wish to preserve as a religiously oriented people. If our communities do not have synagogues and religious schools and worshippers and teachers and rabbis, our image is diminished and our posture is not correct.

It is to these that we Jews look for our religious inspiration and to which our neighbors look as proof of our religious fidelity. We know that a Jewish community is alive when its temple glows with vital activity, with worship, study, and religiously motivated social fellowship.

tion has changed their life situation sharply." By contrast, upper-class prejudices tend to persist, regardless of education.

The report does not, however, imply that education is necessarily incapable of changing prejudices. What it does say is that formal education, as it now operates, appears largely ineffective in this area.

As an indication of the protective reflexes of the highly educated, the report finds that that group was most enthusiastic in support of the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision at first. But, the report says, as Southern resistance stiffened, many in the highly educated group withdrew their backing and became the staunchest supporters of gradualism.

Other findings are these:

The highest level of prejudice among college students is among business majors.

The visible effects of education against prejudice are consistently greater among persons with a foreign-born parent than among those of native parentage.

Generally, women seem more readily influenced by education than men.

The report is based on results of twenty-six opinion surveys and interviews from 1948 to 1959, says the New York Times. It is the first publication of the Institute of Human Relations Press.

history as well as the Bible should be studied in the original.

Mr. Ben-Gurion expressed these views in an interview with Rabbi Jay Kaufman, vice-president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, for publication in the winter issue of the magazine, "American Judaism", says the New York Times. The Israeli statesman said that in addition to stronger educational background, there must be an "intensification of personal ties with Israel" even on the part of young Jews who do not intend to settle in Israel.

He called for extended study trips by Jewish high school and college students and urged parents to send their children to Israel for their confirmation celebration. In addition he pointed to the need for immigration to Israel of young scientists and intellectuals.

Without closer identification with Jewish life, he warned, "American Jewry would have no roots or foundations, and the greatest Jewish center of our times may completely lose its Jewish character, as other communities in America have lost their distinctiveness."

MOSCOW PAPER CONFIRMS MURDER OF MIKHOELS

play by David Bergelson called "Prince Reubeini," about the population of 300,000 Jews from Spain under the Inquisition in the late 15th century. The play never opened and Bergelson was among several hundred Jewish writers who died in the purge.

Mikhoels was given an elaborate state funeral and was buried with honors after his death had been represented as an automobile accident, says the New York Times. But at the height of the anti-Jewish campaign early in 1948 he was denounced as a "Jewish bourgeois nationalist" who had worked hand in glove with the United States intelligence.

WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS SEEKS MORE WITNESSES TO NAZI CRIMES IN POLAND

The World Jewish Congress in New York is seeking witnesses able to give evidence against Nazis accused of murdering Jews in a number of areas of Poland. Several investigations are now being carried out by the West German authorities in connection with these crimes. Witnesses are required to give evidence against Nazis charged with crimes in the following areas:

1) Radom and the cities and towns of Radom district, in particular: Opatow, Sandomierz, Busko, Chmelnik, Lukow, and Miedzyrzec. Witnesses are needed against members of the Security Service, Gestapo, Security Police, and the Gendarmerie. Investigations into these crimes are being carried out in Germany and Austria. Dozens of Nazis are involved in the crimes.

2) Kowel: Witnesses are needed for an investigation against two area-commissioners and their personnel.

3) Lubomil: Evidence is sought against those responsible for the various murders in Lubomil.

4) Baranowicze and the adjacent towns, Hanuswicze, Nowogrodek, Slonim, Lida. The crimes there were committed by the members of the branches of the Security Police at Baranowicze.

5) Borissow, Sembin, and adjacent localities: The investigation is concerned with murders committed in July-October, 1941, by members of the Einsatzgruppe B.

The search for witnesses has been touched off by West German investigations into Nazi crimes in Warsaw, and Lublin and its district. Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the W.J.C. Institute of Jewish Affairs, stated that any survivor of the Warsaw Ghetto might constitute a valuable witness in the investigations now being conducted in Germany. Witnesses are also required in connection with investigations of Nazi crimes in Lublin and district, in particular; Buda-Opalin, Trawniki, Pantatowa, Lublin-Alter Flughafen, Lublin-Deutsche Ausrustungswerke, Anapol.

CAN YOU TESTIFY? WILL YOU? THE NEED IS URGENT

From time to time, the World Jewish Congress issues appeals for witnesses to come forward to testify against a Nazi criminal or criminals. In recent months these appeals have become more frequent, due primarily to the fact that the activities of the German prosecuting authorities are geared to the statute of limitations which might shield many of Hitler's hatchet men; it expires in 1965.

West German public prosecutors and the Central Office for the Investigation of War Criminals in Ludwigsburg are presently carrying out about five hundred investigations, involving thousands of Nazis, mostly medium and small fry, but also a number of bigwigs. Many of them lived in anonymity, under aliases, sometimes with the connivance of their fellow citizens. They hoped that this would guarantee their life-long safety from punishment for the hideous crimes in which they participated.

The investigations cover not only Poland, the graveyard of more than three million European Jews, but also the Baltic countries, the Soviet Union, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Italy, France, and even Tunisia.

Faced by a major handicap in their efforts to find evidence and witnesses, the German prosecutors and the Central Office turn to the World Jewish Congress to use its world-wide network of offices in locating Nazi victims who are able and willing to testify.

So thorough was the Hitlerite action that frequently no witnesses are left to tell the tale. Out of the death camp of Chelmno, for instance, where hundreds of thousands of Jews perished, only four escaped. They responded to the World Jewish Congress appeal to give evidence. In many instances only a handful, sometimes only single survivors, are available. We are very well aware that many a Nazi victim is unwilling to come forward to relive the horrors of the past, to face his tormentors again, but justice must be done, and done swiftly so that the world may know that every possible effort has been made to punish those responsible for the tragedy of European Jewry.

If you survived Hitler's hell, or if you know someone who survived, and you read in these columns that witnesses are needed, it is hoped that you will respond, if you can provide evidence that may facilitate justice.
